

SanIndus doesn't call service just service. We call it taking full responsibility. SanIndus just asks customers regarding the needed responsibility one simple question: Must we completely take care of the storage solution? If the answer is yes, we do it. Completely. We can say this: Everything is full redundant. So maintenance is just replacing components while the live spare part is still performing, without any downtime. Storage then becomes something simple just to use, not to worry anymore about. An attractive situation made possible by SanIndus her technology.
